

Pharmaceuticals & Medical Devices

Experienced Pharmaceuticals & Medical Devices Defense Team

The legal team at Conroy Simberg defends pharmaceutical companies, retailers, healthcare providers, pharmacists and medical product manufacturers in a variety of pharmaceutical and medical device litigation. Our legal professionals are committed to delivering highly responsive legal representation to clients facing individual claims and class action lawsuits involving allegations that companies manufactured dangerous drugs and or defective products.

The attorneys in our pharmaceuticals and medical devices practice have decades of experience handling complex cases, including claims involving:

- Oxycontin
- Thimerosal
- Polidocanol
- Ephedra
- Vioxx
- Phenylpropanolamine (PPA)
- Surgical implants
- Thin film implants
- Prosthetic devices
- Health and dietary supplements
- Heparin pre-filled syringes
- Ranitidine
- Microwave ablation devices
- Cryolipolysis devices
- Intraocular lens implants
- Automated external defibrillators (AED's)

Protecting Our Clients' Professional Reputations and Livelihoods

Conroy Simberg understands that a great deal is at stake when a company or healthcare professional is facing a legal claim involving dangerous drugs and defective medical products. We know that these types of lawsuits can damage our clients' reputations and threaten their businesses and livelihoods. When handling a pharmaceutical product or medical device claim, our lawyers remain sensitive to our clients' needs and concerns. We promptly respond to clients' questions and keep clients apprised of the laws, regulations and legal developments that may have a bearing on their case.

Developing a successful defense strategy in pharmaceutical and medical device cases requires an extensive understanding of clients' products and the various industries within which they operate. When defending a case, our legal team takes the time to become familiar with the complex medical, scientific and engineering issues underlying the claim. We conduct extensive discovery to secure all of the reports and evidence necessary to investigate the claim and consult with industry experts qualified to analyze and evaluate complex pharmaceutical and medical device cases.

Developing Strategies that Resolve Claims

Conroy Simberg focuses on resolving claims involving dangerous drugs and defective medical products as efficiently and effectively as possible. Our lawyers collaborate with clients to formulate legal approaches and strategies that minimize the costs and exposures associated with this type of litigation. We understand that pharmaceutical and medical device claims can be highly stressful and our attorneys aim to avoid lengthy litigation by negotiating optimal resolutions for our clients. When advisable, our lawyers employ alternative dispute resolution processes, including arbitration and mediation, to settle these types of cases.

In the event that a claim cannot be successfully negotiated or resolved outside of the court system, our attorneys defend clients at all levels of the litigation process. Our lawyers are seasoned litigators with years of experience representing clients in the state and federal trial and appellate court systems. Our legal professionals keep clients informed at all stages of litigation and work closely with them to develop legal strategies that expeditiously bring an end to the litigation process.

